

God's Logic verses Human Logic:

The Lesson of the Seatbelt

To understand the difference in God's logic as opposed to human logic, I use the example of people who do not wear seatbelts.

Rich Mullins was a famous Christian musician who wrote the beloved song "Our God is an awesome God." Rich never wore his seatbelt because he trusted God with his life. He theorized if God wanted to take him home, God alone would will it.

Rich was in a car accident and thrown from his vehicle onto the road. But as he rose from the pavement still somewhat alive, he was run over by a truck and killed.

Did Rich's theory prove correct?

God sees things differently.

God wants us alive, while Satan wants us dead. God wants us alive and fighting demons. Satan wants us out of the game. If Satan can kill all of us, Satan wins the game.

The moment Satan sees any human not wearing their seatbelt, Satan wastes no time looking down the road many miles picking oncoming cars for demons to possess the drivers causing an accident killing you.

But conversely, the moment Satan sees you put your seatbelt on, he drops efforts to affect your demise, as his focus is better spent on those who do not.

All God wants is to win the game against Satan. God's actions on earth are limited by the strict rules of the game. We humans are expendable players in the game. God uses us to win the game. God needs us to be "smart" about playing the game. Like always wearing your seat belt to at least remain alive. To put up some resistance to Satan's constant efforts to kill us.

When God sees you always keeping yourself alive and not falling for Satan's deception, God can start to use you in the game, by sending you on important missions. Each with great rewards in heaven.

Those who do not wear their seatbelts for any reason, are just not valuable to God due to their own foolishness by not paying attention to the game. Rich Mullins took himself out of the game by his own free will, not God's wishes.

This highlights the difference between God's logic and human logic. Human logic is flawed by Satan's deception. While God's logic is so profoundly logical, it leaves you in awe.

Get smart about the game. Pay attention to the game. Make yourself valuable to God. Keep yourself alive. Wear your seat belt.
